Food

We offer our super premium pet food because we understand the unique relationship between people and pets. Ever since we created our first bestselling pet book, we’ve been reading your stories—sharing your laughter, tears and, most importantly, your love for your pets.

Mealtime is one of those special moments when we all connect with our pets.

That’s why we say that “food is more than just nutrition, it’s also about comfort, love and appreciation.”

Making wholesome and balanced pet food is part of our mission to share happiness, inspiration and wellness in everything we do.

We believe that Chicken Soup for the Soul pet food is the best value in the super premium pet food category.

True to our roots, every package provides a link to read an inspirational Chicken Soup for the Soul story selected for that product. Now, more than ever, Chicken Soup for the Soul is “Changing the world one story at a time.”
Nutrition

We make our dog food for your pets and ours. It’s specially formulated to provide the nutrition they need at every stage of life:

- Puppy
- Large Breed Puppy
- Adult
- Large Breed Adult
- Adult Small Bites
- Weight Care
- Mature

“Holistic for Health”

The entire Chicken Soup for the Soul pet food line includes only the finest ingredients with four USDA-inspected meats (chicken, turkey, duck and salmon), fruits and vegetables like peas, spinach, carrots, apples, tomatoes, blueberries and cranberries, and herbs like rosemary and parsley.

We do not add wheat, corn, soy, artificial coloring, flavoring or preservatives to our products.
Comfort

Our pet food provides “peace of mind” knowing that you are serving your dog wholesome and balanced premium pet food. It allows you to focus on the other aspects of your relationship with your pet: like going for a walk, playing ball or just sitting together reading a book while rubbing a belly.

Love

Because we love our pets too – meet some of our Chicken Soup for the Soul family members!

Appreciation

All pets deserve the opportunity to feel loved and appreciated. A number of us at Chicken Soup for the Soul have adopted animals from shelters. So, when it came time to shoot the photos for our new pet food packaging, we had an idea. Instead of paying for “professional” pet models, we donated money to a local shelter and featured some of their cats and dogs. We are proud that each of the pets featured on our new packaging is a rescue that is now appreciated as part of a loving family!

On the back of each bag you can find a short story about each of our star rescues. We support the mission of rescue organizations nationwide.

Share Your Story

We believe in changing the world one story at a time, and you can be a part of that mission by sharing your own stories on our website or Facebook. You can even send a story to be considered for one of our new books! If you would like to submit your story, go to http://www.chickensoup.com/story-submissions to find a list of our upcoming book topics, our writing guidelines and our submission form.

Our Story

At Chicken Soup for the Soul, we share happiness, inspiration and wellness through everything we do. We also include a story from one of our bestselling pet books on every bag. We know that for your pet, happiness begins with wellness. And wellness starts with eating food that is wholesome and nutritious and made from the purest ingredients.

Wishbone is quite fussy and also a bit of a drama queen. He prefers dog food of the highest quality — and price — and has a particular gentlemanly way about him. He likes routine, and he prefers his bowl to always be in the same spot in the kitchen — although when the weather is nice he doesn’t mind dining al fresco.

Wishbone won’t take a treat from you unless you ask him to sit first. He likes to demonstrate how well behaved he is. For him, the chance to show off is as much of a treat as any dog snack could ever be.

A few months ago, Wishbone went off anything that was cube shaped. He would eat all of his dinner; the round, crunchy beef-flavoured bits, the odd-shaped, green vegetable bits, but he wouldn’t touch the cubes.

Not only that, but he would pick them up through gritted teeth, one tiny cube at a time, and place them in a neat, symmetrical row alongside his bowl for everyone to see. Almost like a military line-up of kibble. He’d eaten cubes for six years previously, but now, for some reason, they were off limits.

His brother Nibbles, or Nobs as he’s been nicknamed, is not quite as fussy. In fact, he’s not fussy at all. Nobs has developed a particular liking for carrots recently, but his snack selection hasn’t always been so healthy.

The first few months of Nobs’ life coincided with a period that became commonly known in our household as The Great Disappearance. It began with the first big food shop. I was certain I had bought a packet of fresh salmon. In fact, I was certain that I had taken it out of the shopping bag and placed it on the side, but when I turned to get it to put in the fridge, it was gone.

Where had it gone? Straight into Nobs’ belly.

Wishbone on the other hand was once offered fresh prawns, but turned his nose up. I guess they weren’t organic or something. As I said, he has very high standards.

Over the next few weeks the salmon was joined by an entire loaf of bread — which poor Nobs couldn’t hide very well, as it swelled up inside him like a big, yeasty balloon. He didn’t keep it down for very long. Shortly after, Nobs stole a cream-cheese-stuffed jalapeno from the barbeque. And that too didn’t stay down. Until then, I had never seen a dog physically cry. Wishbone simply looked at his gluttonous brother in disgust. How could he be so uncouth?

This was just the tip of the iceberg though. These at least were all food stuffs. During the first year of their lives, Wishbone snacked on dog food, dog treats and the occasional tin of sardines. All things that he was allowed to have, and that were perfectly acceptable.

Nobs, meanwhile, ate his way through shoes, socks, and hats before slowly progressing to more expensive items such as mobile phones, television remotes, the chargers for both, DVDs, books and even a computer mouse.

Then he began to tackle bigger items — kitchen cupboards, the sofa, my bed, the guest bed, his own bed even. He ate inconvenient things, like my passport, and money. He ate messy things, including a blue pen, which he chomped while sitting on my crisp white bed sheets (where he was not allowed to be I hasten to add). Then he got more adventurous and injected some danger into things by snacking on a serrated bread knife, some kitchen scissors, and a lighter.

The ultimate in his culinary expedition, though, was the venomous green snake that I caught him sampling when I came home one day. He wasn’t sure what to do with it at first. Should he eat it? Should he play with it?

What he should have done was leave it alone, but there was no telling him that. There was a good ten minutes of Nobs throwing the snake up in the air while it swung at him viciously. I frantically tried to call him away from the snake before he was bitten. In the end the snake didn’t make it, but not before poor Nobs got a nip on the tongue, causing him to spend two days under close observation, receiving medication to counter the effects of the bite. However, he was given lots of treats during this time so it wasn’t all bad.

Wishbone and Nobs are middle aged now. They are coming up to their seventh birthday and, if anything, Wishbone has gotten even fussier. Cubes are back on the menu this week, but anything chicken flavoured is off.

As for Nobs, he still eats anything. Including cubes.

How We Give Back

Improving the world around us is part of the Chicken Soup for the Soul mission of sharing happiness, inspiration and wellness through everything we do. Today, we focus our philanthropic activities on the Humpty Dumpty Institute, our charitable partner.

We collaborate with the Humpty Dumpty Institute on a number of initiatives related to literacy, hunger and animals. A portion of Chicken Soup for the Soul sales goes to Humpty Dumpty to support its work. Chicken Soup for the Soul also donates royalties from certain books to many other non-profits.
