Words of wisdom for growing older

Chicken Soup for the Soul collection offers perspective for the golden years

COS COB, Conn. – Sure, you may have a few more wrinkles, a little less hair and much more time on your hands, but crossing the age 60 threshold also ensures you have a better perspective—a special insight on life—that you didn’t possess in your younger years. And whether you’re beginning a new adventure in retirement, or just starting the journey to the golden years down the road, nothing can replace the priceless experiences you will have along the way.

Chicken Soup for the Soul: Older & Wiser (Chicken Soup for the Soul Publishing, LLC, September 2008, $14.95) presents real-life, inspirational stories about the wisdom we gain on the journey of life, and—as Chicken Soup for the Soul contributor Tom Harken writes—the “matchless moments” that we never forget. Written from the perspective of all ages, including retirees and divorcees, grandparents and grandchildren, and husbands and wives, Chicken Soup for the Soul: Older & Wiser has a story for everyone at every age.

“As a grandmother, I still have aches and pains, but they are merely reminders of the privilege of growing older,” writes Chicken Soup for the Soul contributor Mickey Mann Johnson. “Like George Burns once said, ‘Growing older is not always golden, but it sure beats the alternative.’”

Chicken Soup for the Soul: Older & Wiser is part of the “101 Best Stories” series by the new publisher of Chicken Soup for the Soul books. With refreshed cover designs and interior layouts, books in the “101 Best Stories” series offer the Editor’s favorite tales and poems submitted in the 15-year history of Chicken Soup for the Soul, reflecting the brand’s excitement and new energy on this memorable anniversary.

In Chicken Soup for the Soul: Older & Wiser, you’ll read about:

- How author Sally Kelly-Engeman found love for the second time, experiencing two great loves in one lifetime.
- How author Leslie J. Clark embraced a two-year sailing trip around the world as part of her husband’s mid-life crisis.
- How author Denise Jacoby’s Grandfather snuck out of the house to surprise his worried wife with flowers for Valentine’s Day
- How author Anita Cheek Milner celebrated her 50th birthday with a “Fifty is Nifty” pin
